THANK YOU FOR YOUR SUPPORT!

Many people believe that sustainable leather is something from the future, but it's here and it's spectacular.

Our new dressage saddle, Serenity, is crafted with full grain leather. The applied tanning agent is made of olive leaves and is ecologically sustainable. Its fragrance reminds you of a late summer's afternoon in the Mediterranean.

For more than 120 years, we've used saddle leathers made from natural vegetable tanning agents. The newly developed wet-green® OBE tanning agent is extracted from the leaves of the olive tree using a method similar to brewing tea, and is made in plants complying to the stringent demands of the food industry.

In Europe, around 12,000,000 tons of olives are harvested every year, and leaves account for around 10% of the harvest weight. These leaves are used by wet-green® to extract its plant-based active ingredient. The olive leaves used are a by-product for olive growers, and in many locations are actually burned. We use this unwanted by-product and help protect our climate while doing it.

The Serenity comes standard with a special deluxe leather, narrow twist tree, a stabilizing billet system and gusset panels. Special features include a larger channel space and a special soft seat that is seamless.

THE CORNER'S CHRONICLER: A PROFILE ON MARY HILLIARD

All photos by Mary Hilliard

To celebrate the 25th anniversary of the Fitch's Corner Horse Trials this summer, the organizers have created a new element: a special photography exhibition by Mary Hilliard. "Fitch's Corner has so many facets, and Mary and her camera are always able to find just the right image to capture its most alluring moments," Fernanda Kellogg, the event's host says. "We have been honored to have her recording our weekend for more than 10 years."

It will come as no surprise to anyone who knows Hilliard that she would be reluctant to talk about herself in an interview. Instead, when I meet her at Babette's for a coffee, in between her tennis lesson and picking-up groceries for a cocktail party the following weekend, she is happier showing me her pictures of the trials on her laptop. There's a yearbook-like quality to the photographs, each with smiling faces of friends enjoying a social event that has come to punctuate the Millbrook summer season. But no matter the casual feeling of these candids, there is that unmistakably discerning eye behind every selected image. "I look for that sixtieth of a second of someone's expression and then move on to the next," she says with her signature matter-of-factness.

Twenty-five of Hilliard's favorite photographs are showcased in a large format with another 50 smaller photos also included, all of which are available for purchase. In addition, Hilliard has put together a slideshow of approximately one hundred images, creating a visual timeline of the trials from its start as a back-yard horseshow, growing into the landmark equestrian weekend it is today.

Hilliard began coming to the Millbrook area in the 1960s with her close friends, Mary Parke and Eric Johnston. Soon, she and her then husband rented Rose Cottage, and by the mid-1970s bought a house on Verbank Road. Eventually, she moved to her current address in Stanfordville, where she now resides. The couple enjoyed the country life on weekends and much of the summer. They joined the Millbrook Golf & Tennis Club and put down roots in the community, building a close circle of friends. In the early 1980s her mother, too, moved to the region, working as a proof-reader for The Millbrook Round-Table under editor Penelope Hall. "Millbrook and its environs is just the same as it was, just lots more people," Hilliard says of area. "People seem to be very happy here to be a part of the community." It was also during this time that Hilliard's career as a photographer took hold. A career that she noted in a Departures cover-story about her, was more "an act of invention rather than reinvention." "[The] Christmas cards we got from friends had what I thought to be pretty bad pictures, so one day it occurred to me that I could do better," Hilliard explained at a recent discussion surrounding an exhibition of her photography in Palm Beach. "So, I signed up for a basic photo course at the Camera Club of NY—it cost $40 dollars—bought a Pentax camera, which all the other students seemed to be using, and told my friends I'd like to take their pictures. But whenever I got a job, I would get so nervous I would pray for rain so I didn't have to go."

Hilliard's break came in the late 1970s

when she was asked to photograph a Giorgio Sant'Angelo couture fashion show. She was hired again and again, as Hilliard's mentor, Sally Kirkland, an editor at Vogue and Life, introduced her to the decade's top designers. Soon she was covering the runway shows of Adolfo, Bill Blass, Calvin Klein, Carolina Herrera, Halston, Oscar de la Renta, and more. Avenue called on her to focus her lens out on the town and cover the New York City party circuit. Next, fashion editor Carrie Donovan hired her to take pictures of the front row and street scene at fashion week, where she became a fixture, and her work regularly appeared in The New York Times, Women's Wear Daily, and more. Hilliard was under-contract with Vogue from 1996-2009, but continued to photograph dazzling private and fundraising events, including Malcolm Forbes' birthday party in Tangier, The Volpi Ball in Venice, and "Nouvelle Society" calendar musts, like the opening night of the Metropolitan Opera, and of course, The Met Ball.

It was during these glamorous years in New York City that Hilliard met and came to know Kirk and Fernanda. Along with revered The New York Times columnist, the late Bill Cunningham, Hilliard began chronicling Fitch's Corner weekend. "[Cunningham] expressed what was so special [about Fitch's]," Hilliard says. 'It's smaller and more personal, in a beautiful setting with people who are seriously interested in horses.'" She continues, "It has a homey, country atmosphere with chickens running around. And even though it has become more sophisticated over the years, it still has all the personal touches of Kirk and Fernanda." The intimate nature of the grounds, knowing that you are at someone's private home, is part of what Hilliard captures so well. But Hilliard is careful never to include an unflattering image of her subjects, which is why she hates dancefloor photos, "you always get someone's backside."

It is this trustworthiness that makes Hilliard one of the most sought-after photographers of her time. "Her subjects feel safe. They are captured in a gentle way. This is what I feel is so powerful about Mary's work: the feeling of trust and safety," Claiborne Swanson Frank, a fellow photographer noted. Petite and slim, with a gentile and kind disposition, Hilliard graciously documents any occasion. "The first thing you notice about Mary is her eyes—vibrant blue, intelligent, inquisitive, searching for the next moment to capture. She exudes a quiet elegance which is imparted to her images," Karen Klopp, founder of what2wearwhere.com and Millbrook resident, says. Despite her enormous popularity, Hillard manages to stay inconspicuous on the job. "Mary stays in the background, and she's never in your face," jewelry designer Kenneth Jay Lane said. "It has something to do with very good manners. She doesn't want to impose herself." It is perhaps this self-recognized shy demeanor, coupled with the sense of safety people have when she's taking their picture, that give her unfettered access to just about everywhere. "She's the only photographer who is invited where there are no photographers allowed… She's a lady," Lane said. Hilliard is considered as much a part of the rarified world she covers as its chronicler. As Bill Hamilton, Fitch's Corner luncheon co-chair, concludes: "I must be at the right party if Mary is here!"

HOULIHAN LAWRENCE

CARING ABOUT THE LAND

A horse grazes at Windy Hill Farm in Millbrook

"We are more ambassadors of the community than agents of any particular house," says Katherine Jennings, manager of Houlihan Lawrence's Millbrook office. "We educate buyers about the community, then narrow the search, and, ultimately, find the right house." This particular real estate perspective illuminates that "Millbrook" has become a catch-all title for several neighboring towns and villages including Amenia, Clinton Corners, Dover Plains, Millerton, Pine Plains, Standfordville, Verbank and Wassaic, each with their own distinct personality, not at first easily deciphered through the rolling hills of Duchess County. "The farm-to-table lifestyle, bucolic landscape, and slower pace of life that doesn't sacrifice sophistication is driving the local real estate market. Second-home-buyers are becoming three-quarter time house-dwellers and finally, turning these homes into their primary residences" she says. Far from being a seat of country isolation, the wider Millbrook area is a vibrant community with an active social life.

Perhaps no other event is better positioned to highlight this vibrancy than Fitch's Corner Horse Trials, celebrating its 25th anniversary this year. Houlihan Lawrence became a sponsor of the trials 10 years ago, when they opened their Millbrook office in 2007. "The personal and equestrian nature of the weekend fit perfectly for us," says Tony Cutugno, senior vice president of Houlihan Lawrence Private Brokerage. "This was the ideal event to introduce ourselves to the community a decade ago and we are so pleased to have a longstanding partnership with this important Millbrook institution." A life-long horsewoman Jennings says of Fitch's Corner, "You can't sit at the booth without seeing a friend pass by, doing the thing they love. It's a way to connect with our customers in a place that isn't about sales, and in a setting that makes Millbrook so unique." Cutugno agrees, noting "While we are very innovative when it comes to marketing, we will always be in the relationship business. Fitch's Corner helps us to forge friendships based on a common love of the sporting life and the land." This personal connection to the community, both agree, is what sets Houlihan Lawrence apart and builds relationships that last long after any individual sale.

Established in 1888, Houlihan Lawrence is the largest residential real estate office north of New York City with 30 offices and 1,500 agents servicing communities from Bronxville to Columbia County. Worthy of note, the company set the record this year in Westchester County with their sale of the Rockefeller Estate, which belonged to David Rockefeller, (and whose recent estate sale at Christie's commanded unprecedented results for paintings by Monet and Matisse), realizing a final bid of $33 million, fifty-percent above the asking price of $22 million. Along the way, Cutugno and other agents aided the sellers in putting the land into a conservation easement with the Westchester Land Trust, where Cutugno has served as a member of the advisory board. Cutugno and the team at Houlihan Lawrence know well the importance of land conservation and have become reputed for it here in Dutchess County as well, often working in conjunction with the Dutchess Land Conservancy, based in Millbrook.

"The DLC's relationship with our local realtors is very important, as they are often the first introduction buyers have to the value and significance of conservation," notes Becky Thornton, the DLC's president. "Houlihan Lawrence has been a wonderful partner for the DLC. They have long been supporters and most recently were a special events sponsor for our Spring Barn Dance." This special relationship is highlighted by the company's representation in the buying and selling of three local landmark farms: Raining Stone Farm in Verbank, Schoonhoven Farm and Windy Hill, both in Millbrook, all with large conservation easements.

"The Dutchess Land Conservancy helps maintain the integrity of Millbrook and the surrounding areas. We have worked together successfully and the end result has been a win-win for those who are selling property, those who are purchasing, and the community at large," Tony Cutugno says. If not a direct land bequest to the conservancy, often a family will be interested in finding a conservation-minded buyer. This constant watchfulness of the Dutchess Land Conservancy and Houlihan Lawrence, as well as the community itself, has, for the most part, kept wider-development of the area at bay. "The beauty of Millbrook is that it hasn't really changed," Jennings says. "The changes that have come, have happened slowly, but the character of the place remains."

Smart Investing Starts with Strong Relationships

There's only one way to know how to invest for your client, and that's to know your client. So every account at Bank of Millbrook Trust and Investment Services starts with getting to know you – your circumstances, your concerns, your hopes and your goals. All learned by sitting face-to-face with the person who both develops and manages your investment approach.

Meredith Tiedemann has created wealth strategies for her clients for years, and with her foundation as a Certified Private Wealth Advisor®, she can help you maximize growth, monetize and protect your assets, minimize taxes and, ultimately, transfer your wealth to future generations.

It starts with relationships. Like portfolios, they aren't built overnight and they're better when nurtured over the long term. That's something as Dutchess County's only locally managed Trust and Investment Services department, we are uniquely suited to do. Let's get to know each other.
